

Unlocking the digital workplace

Digitalization, changing workforce demographics, and high employee expectations all impact how businesses will fuel future growth. The spotlight is now firmly on redefining the employee experience and how they connect, collaborate and communicate. Organizations need to redefine the way their employees work and ensure they provide staff with the same caliber of digital experience at work as at home, ultimately resulting in increased business performance.

By 2020:

Drivers for the digital workplace

A user-centric approach is needed to balance the freedom of users to choose the best way to work. The IT department needs to enable a seamless user experience which remains compliant, managed and secure.

BUT... 88% of organizations said their biggest challenge for 2017 was building the organization of the future ⁽⁸⁾

Top challenges include:

1. Resistance from company leadership
2. Complex organizational design

Those that DO have a digital workplace strategy in place:
