

How can we help?

Get your remote employees productive, healthy, and engaged within one week

Remote Work Crash Course

Businesses are facing new challenges. Governments are urging people to work from home. To many employers and employees this is a new scenario which they are not familiar with. For this reason, Atos is offering the Remote Work Crash Course. A 5-day program to help your organization optimize its business continuity during these challenging times. Our Remote Work Crash Course ensures that your employees, now working from home, are fully supported in their efforts to get “back to business” as fast as possible. It addresses personal and team effectiveness, engagement, and cyber security topics.

Every morning for 5 days a team of specialists from Atos will provide a 1.5-hour online training focusing on getting your employees fully able to perform their normal work from their new location: home. The content of the training will be finetuned to your needs and is likely to cover the four topics mentioned above.

Throughout the rest of the day, our specialists will help your employees with any questions that they may have. Each day will be evaluated, and if certain issues arise during the evaluation, the program for the next day can be adapted.

Introducing the Remote Work Crash Course

In these challenging times, most employees must work remotely whenever possible. The sudden switch from face-to-face collaboration to exclusive remote work can be a challenge. Your business continuity is at stake and employee satisfaction and engagement may have been impacted negatively. The Atos Remote Work Crash Course addresses those topics that are required to get your employees back up to speed.

The 5-day program provides impactful training for employees, delivered through online sessions, addressing professional, social, and health side of working remotely.

The Approach

First, we will start with a scan of your organization to personalize the training that your employees will receive. A 15 minute online survey will identify your biggest needs, focussing on the four topics (personal productivity, team effectiveness, employee engagement, and cyber security). After this our team of specialists will set up a range of seminars and an information portal to train and support your employees quickly and effectively. Each of these will be custom made to help your organisation in the best possible way.

What will you get?

After this 5-day crash course your employees will be much better able to address the challenges facing your organisation. Their ability to perform at the best of their ability will be boosted. The main difficulties that employees experience with remote working will be addressed, and remaining improvement ideas are identified.

As a result, your employees will grow their confidence in working remotely, be re-engaged with their work, experience better communication across the organization, and encounter fewer frustrations caused by technical issues or not understanding a particular piece of functionality.

Next steps

We conclude the program on Friday afternoon. Whilst you will have experienced a step change already, you may wish to push this further: enlarging the audience, broadening the scope, or simply raising the bar higher.
